

Summer's a great time to write!

If you're like most of us, you've spent a busy winter burrowed away at work. Now it's time to kick your shoes off and do something special for yourself. Why not take that writing class you've been meaning to take? I'm teaching a full day workshop that might be the perfect fit for you.

Writing Children's Books for the Educational Market

with Laura Purdie Salas

Everyone knows the difficulty of getting published. But there's a group of publishing companies who are always on the lookout for good, professional writers: educational publishers for K-12 materials. In this workshop, you'll learn about the variety of writing published by these organizations and how you can get assignments to write them. You'll complete in-class exercises and work on an introductory submission packet. Students are asked to bring writing materials and 3 books put out by educational publishers, if possible (ask a public librarian or a school librarian to point some out to you). Also bring topics you're interested in writing about or drafts of proposed education work. Thirty minute lunch break.

Sunday, July 27, 10:00 am – 4:30 pm
